Productivity of Manual Tree Length Harvest Operations in Central Nova Scotia Jul 21 2020 The manual tree length harvest method involves the felling, delimiting, and topping of trees at the stump with chainsaws, after which the trees are skidded to the roadside. In Nova Scotia, the majority of wood purchased from private contractors by Scott Worldwide is in tree length form. The rates established for payment of wood produced in tree length are currently under review by Scott Worldwide and its suppliers. As part of this review, a study was initiated to determine manual tree length production in softwood stands. This report documents the results of the study. In total, 87 days of harvesting data were collected from 24 blocks, with 31 days collected on the productivity of one-man crews, 24 on two-man crews, and 32 on 3-man crews.
